

"Mind the (lexical) gap!": the bilingual dictionary as a bridge between languages and cultures

Giovanni Tallarico (Université Paris VII-Diderot, Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Milano)

In our contribution, we shall deal with the cross-cultural dimension of bilingual dictionaries (focusing on the French/Italian pair). In order to illustrate the culture-specific elements of lexicon<sup>1</sup>, we shall focus on the phenomenon of equivalence and will try to outline semantic implications for partial and non-equivalence (due reference will be made to denotational and connotational meanings; linguistic vs. extralinguistic dichotomy; lexical gaps, both semantic and referential). Taking the anisomorphism of languages as a starting point<sup>2</sup>, we shall develop the concept of cultural load<sup>3</sup> (non-shared cultural loads will prove particularly significant) and consider language-culture as a whole. Finally, we shall touch on the phenomenon of false borrowings<sup>4</sup>, bearers of a fallacious similarity, and study some cases from a contemporary French-Italian dictionary.
